- 1 Two Indian states, Uttarakhand and Uttar Pradesh, recently announced strict penalties for those who contaminate food with spit, urine, or dirt. Offenders could face fines up to 100,000 rupees and even imprisonment. These measures were introduced after unverified videos surfaced on social media showing vendors spitting in food, which sparked strong public reactions. Another video showed a housemaid mixing urine into food she was preparing, raising concerns about food safety.

印度的兩個邦，烏塔拉坎德邦和北方邦，最近宣布將對那些在食物中吐痰、混入尿液或髒物的人施加嚴厲懲罰。違規者最高可被罰款 100,000 盧比，甚至面臨監禁。這些規定出爐後，社交媒體上出現了未經證實的影片，顯示一些攤販在食物中吐痰，引發了大眾的強烈反應。還有一個影片顯示一名家政女工將尿液混入她準備的食物中，這些影片引發了對食品安全的擔憂。

However, some of these videos led to false accusations targeting Muslims, which were later debunked. For instance, a woman accused of mixing urine in food was initially said to be Muslim, but police later confirmed she was Hindu.

然而，部分影片引發了針對穆斯林的指控，這些指控後來被查證為不實。比如，有人指控將尿液混入食物的女子是穆斯林，但警方確認她其實是印度教徒。
